A: In Windows7 64bit, SFC can repair the file as it's a serious issue, although it would make the PC inoperative. Moreover, you can reboot your PC in Safe mode to resolve the issue. For more help, please try to locate your Avcodec-52.108.0.dll in your Avcodec-52.108.0.dll directory. Generation and use of a triple-positive cell line expressing a thymus-specific transgene in leukemic mice. The generation of transgenic animals expressing a transgene under the control of a thymus-specific promoter is a powerful technique to study the role of the thymus and T cell development in vivo. Here, we report the successful generation of triple-positive transgenic mice expressing a thymus-specific transgene as well as the expression of the transgene in a subset of thymocytes. The triple-positive cell line (HPC2) originated from a thymus-specific triple-positive transgenic mouse line generated by genetic cross of B6.2/H-2b transgenic mice with MCW/H-2b-restricted CD8+ T cells. The construct of the HPC2 cell line consists of an integration in the Lck locus of a transgene encoding a fusion protein consisting of the cytoplasmic tail of CD8 and a modified form of CD3-zeta. The transgene is driven by a promoter from the major histocompatibility complex class II antigen, H-2Kb, together with the MHC class II, -alpha (H-2Kb) and -beta (H-2Db) genes. The HPC2 cell line is positive for both H-2Kb and H-2Db as indicated by expression of these gene products on the surface of the cells. A fraction of thymocytes isolated from HPC2 mice are positive for the H-2Kb and H-2Db molecules. Furthermore, these thymocytes also express the transgene. Thus, the HPC2 cells represent a very useful tool for the study of thymus-dependent immune responses.Q: function does not work as expected with loop I am having a minor problem.
