The following table displays various performance information and statistics for the table-based Web sites that have been included on WebSiteTuner.org. One of the most interesting statistics you can obtain for any website is the number of unique, internal (not external) links. The more unique, internal links a web site has, the more important and valuable the site is to Google. Therefore, the unique, internal link statistics on this page are quite important. There are a number of ways to obtain these statistics. WebSiteTuner.org gives you the option to use its own keyword or site index to gather this data. In addition to unique, internal link statistics, there are also some other pages on WebSiteTuner.org that give you a broad picture of the quality of the individual web sites listed. These pages are: * Load Time - This shows the average time it takes to load the home page of the web site. * Site Speed - This is the total page load time for the web site. This value is also known as "Site Time". * Page Speed - This is the time it takes to load a page on the site. * Connectivity - This is the page load time for the primary site URL. If there are other URLs on the site, then their page load times will also be reported. * Responsiveness -
