More importantly, Rance... as we've had some pretty big storms here in New England, and they seem to be driving the water up against the roads. COX: Well, you're going to have some very interested people watching at home because they're going to be getting some great data right now. So, the big question: Is the storm spinning and moving north? The wind forecast does not have the storm spinning, but they do call for some significant bands of precipitation. The models do seem to prefer the northern end of the storm. It's one thing to have a total of 14 inches of rain for the month, but in a single storm, it's a completely different situation. And the models suggest that could be a total, record amount of rain for this time of year. And as you mentioned, the storm is expected to hit New England really hard on Sunday morning. What's new in DOOMTANK:

By: //Gilles The first thing to consider about firearms in general is that unlike many two and three-dimensional art forms, in the art world as in life, you can never win. The choices are always the same. I chose to fasten together in my mind some of the most incredible and tragic stories from the two centuries of American gun violence that has irrevocably altered and warped the way the United States of America looks at its guns. I can't pretend that the majority of the people in the United States and the world the way it is now, is this way because I'm a fan of the NRA, or any gun enthusiasts for that matter. It's because the corporations that ran our economy and government have used their power to impose their will on all the other people in this society. Here I'm presenting a series of dramatis personae that help us to understand what kind of weapons we are willing to destroy the world around us to secure. There have been few weapons in the history of humankind that have done so much harm as American handguns have. I invite you to consider the people below by their own creation and loss. This is not a documentary that you should read as history. It is an argument about our present, given what we did to get here. I invite the reader to consider the story of Virginia Tech and the other massacres in America and its aftermath, that represent what was done to anyone who questioned the right of the United States government to continue its existence. The central question I try to ask is this - What if the United States had a gun attack like this every day? If Virginia Tech is a document of modern American carnage it is just that: a document. What I have attempted to do here, is cross-reference the ways those actions relate to our history. For this, I have included an introduction in each drama and you can read all about that here. In the interests of maintain the integrity of the documents and the right to make rebuttal for each of the following, I will not name the victims. I have been asked many times throughout my YouTube channel what I think about the NRA and I always reply with this quote from Gandhi: "If you can't propose the change you want, at least be part of the solution" I can only take responsibility for the person writing this report, as unlike you I am not
