We spent most of the day running around, one place was very cool - we went down a slide that dropped you into a huge pool of water. Really neat!! We had some fun with our friends, drank some soda, and even went for a ride on their roller coaster. This was my baby girl's first time to the water park and she LOVED it! My baby boy loves the water even more than she does, and he even had fun in the pool. Great day!! We got home today and I'm not taking my boys to school tomorrow because it is the first day of my 5 year sabbatical from teaching. I'm going to have a day to myself and I plan on spending all of it baking with my mother! Tuesday, August 20, 2009 My mother and I had a great time creating this for one of the preschools

I have a container with 3 images: 1 big image and 2 tiny images. They are all in a relative position. How to make it so that if the right space goes above a certain pixel (the red line) it should make the big image visible and the two tiny images get smaller? Also, how to center both the big image and the tiny images on the container? Here's my CSS: .item { width:200px; height:300px; background-color: #e9e9e9; display: flex; justify-content: center; align-items: center; position:relative; background-image:url(background.jpg); background-repeat:no-repeat; } .big { width: 300px; height: 300px; } .small { width: 50px; height: 50px; } A: For the images to be visible, the following needs to be true: The container is wider than the container width minus the sum of the images' widths. The images
