What is.Q: What does the term "A slice is a bounded subset with an associated disc" mean? I was reading a proof of a group having a finite number of elements of a type given by a single monomorphism. The definition is: A type is a nonempty set. A monomorphism is a set $A \subseteq X$ such that $X

$\setminus A$ is a subset of some other set Y. A monomorphism is designated as $f: A \hookrightarrow Y$. A map is an element of Y; a closed subset of X; a function $f: A \to Y$; or a function $f: X \to Y$. Here is the proof where it is assumed that the group G has a finite number of elements: If G has n elements, then it is possible to consider G to be a subset of a set X with an associated disc, as follows. $$\vcenter{\hbox{\includegraphics{G_with_disc.png}}}$$ X is finite and its element set is $\{1, 2,..., n\}$. 6d1f23a050
