yes they do. go to my tv connection, click your tv tuner, then click scan. windows will then scan the tv bands and return any channels detected. you can then select them and add them to your channel list. again, wintv 7 does not support 'scan and add' and manual setting of the starting and ending channel numbers is necessary. to add a single channel (assuming there is a tv signal on that channel), go to settings (click the gear icon in the lower left hand corner of the wintv application) -> devices and choose your tv tuner. then click tuner setup and select the format of the channel you want to add (digital atsc, digital qam or analog tv). for both the starting and ending channel use the channel number you want to add. example, if you want to add analog channel 3, then select 3 for both the starting and ending channel. then click scan. since you are only scanning one channel, it should find this channel quickly and add it to the channel list. if you're running an hd capable set top box like an xbox 360 or ps3 then you should absolutely run your hopper on the softpvr, as it's easy to run your hopper from the softpvr. i downloaded the softpvr from the xbmc downloads page and it works perfectly for the hopper. i can rewind, pause, fast forward, trim recordings, etc and everything works perfectly. the full hd is great if you have a 720p capable set top box, such as the xbox 360. as i mentioned above, the main advantage of the hopper compared to the other hd dvr's on the market is its ability to record both hd-dvds and standard dvds at once. so if you have a dvd collection that you want to watch regularly (or just watch occasionally), you can watch it with the hopper and record it for later. another advantage of the hopper is that its gui is surprisingly close to the xbmc home screen. it's much better than the wintv home center gui that wintv uses, which is useless.

if you need different channel to be in the recording when watching live tv, you must setup your wintv "channel recording". this is needed in order to remember the channel mapping when watching the recorded program. for this you have two ways: when will be the next update for softpvr? the software will be updated for the last version of progdvb (currently 9.4.2) on the 31st of april. if we go with the new version of progdvb then we can share our code with elecard and hopefully get avc h.264 supported as well. i intend to have an official release of softpvr on april 1st. your are wellcome on this platform to discuss any problems you may have. if you are reporting a problem, be sure to mention which version of softpvr (2.4.3, 2.4, 2.1, etc) that you are using along with your model name of your wintv and make sure you mention the exact error that you encounter. a general format for your report might be: error message: wintv model x: error description: 1. wintv firmware version: 2. wintv hardware version: 3. softpvr version: 4. os version: 5. softpvr version: 6. the exact error message you receive and any log file data. wintv 8: the wintv v8 based tuners work fine with the softpvr up to version 2.4. possible issues: 1. wintv firmware version: 2. wintv hardware version: 3. softpvr version: 4. os version: 5. softpvr version: 6. if you encounter stuck or lock-up screen instead of the expected results. if you are unable to access the menu, please press start button and the power button simultaneously for 30 seconds. if after that the device no longer responds, you may have to reset the tuner to factory default. 5ec8ef588b
